Seattle native, Jeff Kashiwa became known as one of the most compelling young saxophonists in contemporary jazz during his first year with The Rippingtons back in 1989. Kashiwa performed hundreds of shows all over the world and appeared on many of the band's classic recordings.

After a decade with The Rippingtons, Kashiwa's instincts led him to his solo career. In 2004 he founded The Sax Pack with saxophonists Steve Cole and Kim Waters and released three CDs together.

Kashiwa released his 11th solo record titled Sunrise. He is in his 12th year as an Instrumental Ensemble and Music Technology instructor, and Department Chair at Shoreline Community College in Seattle, Washington.
